

SHADE IN THE U.S.A.

This month, TOMS Eyewear and designer Jonathan Adler launch a limited-edition collection of exclusive sunglasses and needlepoint cases. The all-American collaboration—frames come in red, white and blue—includes three frames and four cases. Per usual, TOMS makes charitable efforts to give sight to those in need with the sale of each pair of sunglasses, not unlike the original campaign of donating a pair of new shoes to a child in need with every purchase. ## Pop-up Opening Bird Watch

Beginning this month through Labor Day, Brooklyn based boutique Bird—with three locations in Park Slope, Cobble Hill and Williamsburg—opens a pop-up shop on Shelter Island. Appropriately named Beach Bird, the shop will feature all of Jen Mankin's (the owner of the contemporary and luxury shops) favorites with a special emphasis on sunny weather wear and beach accessories. Think Turkish Hammam towels, one-of-a-kind beach stone necklaces from Maine and colorful canvas espadrilles. The boutique will also include exclusives from brands No.6, Alasdair and Rand Papele. 183 NORTH FERRY ROAD, SHELTER ISLAND HEIGHTS, SHOPBIRD.COM

WYSTERIA LANE

New York-based designer Fotini, known for her craft of corsetry, has created silk chiffon ready-to-wear pieces that are perfect for hot summer days in the city. With her signature wisteria print, the pieces display a quality of femininity. For her summer collection, the designer drew inspiration from the soft color palettes of 18th century French painters. Of course, she also includes her flattering corset gowns and cocktail dresses. Hues of butter, sage, soft pink, lavender, taupe and white make these dresses perfect for summer weddings and outdoor celebrations. FOTINI.NYC.COM EK
